Community Liaison Program

SRA Mission

The mission of the SRA is to impact public policy for the benefit of REALTORS® and the protection of private property rights. At the center of SRA's strategy for accomplishing this mission is an efficient and effective member grassroots network.

Issues of special interest to our members at the municipal level include: use and occupancy certificates and associated fees; professional disclosure; sign use; land use; rental property licensure; and other real-estate related ordinances.

Our objectives are accomplished through frequent staff and member interaction with state and local governments, elected officials, community groups, and other interested parties. Our members focus on getting involved with their elected officials and municipal governments at the local level – in the communities where they live, work and vote.

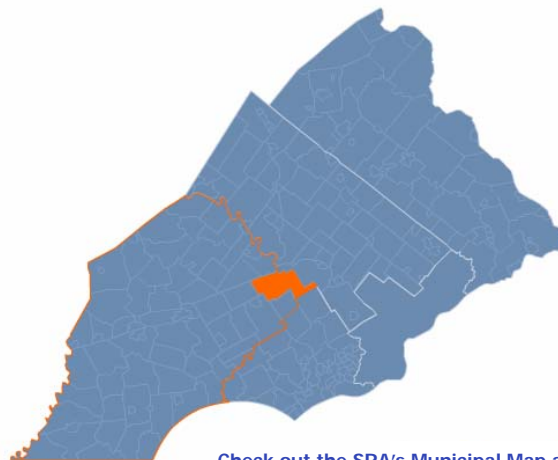

As a liaison between the real estate industry and public officials, we hope to work together to build our communities and ensure the availability of safe and affordable housing for all residents.

Bringing REALTORS® and communities together.

Strengthening REALTOR® relationships with municipalities is key to building the groundwork for success.

The Suburban REALTORS® Alliance Community Liaison Program provides our members with a unique opportunity to become involved in the areas of government which directly impact the communities where they live and work. In the event of a major issue of concern for REALTORS® in the area, the Community Liaison will be briefed by SRA staff and asked to contact their local officials.

To support our mission in 238 municipalities, SRA Community Liaisons utilize the networks they already have to represent the interests of the real estate industry.
